Dallas Paint and Body Shop Demonstrates TX-PACE’s Big Value to Small Businesses in Underserved Communities

Dallas Paint and Body, a minority owned small business, closed a $74,000 PACE project to finance roof-top solar PV that will create over 40,000 kilowatt hours of electricity annually. Savings from the project will be used to pay for the new solar panels. "I want this project to serve as an example to other small businesses in this community, and throughout the state, that we can have access to sustainable energy solutions," says owner Felix Flores.

The City of Dallas closed the state’s smallest PACE project with big impact. “The PACE program levels the playing field for mom and pop shops like ours so that we can also be participants in the clean energy era," states Mr. Flores. Dallas Paint and Body is the first Latino business to use TX-PACE. Located in Southern Dallas, the small business is part of the City's Office of Economic Development's revitalization focus.

To help your business and community take advantage of the TX-PACE program, contact the Texas PACE Authority today.